Historical Sketch of Ottawa . .

BY JOHN THORBURN, LL.D.

OTTAWA has been called "The Washington of the North," and in some respects the designation is not altogether inappropriate. It is within the recollection of some of us that, when Washington was spoken of, it was not unfrequently styled a city of "Magnificent distances." This is no longer the case. It is now a beautiful city, with magnificent public and private buildings lining its avenues and streets, of which the Americans are justly proud. When our Canadian Government takes the same interest in Ottawa that the American Government takes, and has for many years taken, in their Capital, our Northern one will rival if it does not surpass Washington.

A visitor to this City from Boston, Mass., in a communication to "The American Canadian," says: "Naturally a comparison with Washington, the rival Anglo-American metropolis, is one of the first processes in the mind of the traveller. No resident of the United States needs to be ashamed of the Citadel of his nation, and it possesses an accumulated wealth, both intellectual and material, which time alone can bring, but the youthful Ottawa of youthful Canada must claim greater superiority in grandeur of situation and surroundings, commercial advantages and future possibilities." Then, referring to the view from the Suspension Bridge, as one takes in, on the one hand, "the Chaudière Falls, with their headlong tumble of mighty waters over the precipice, with their drenching cloud of spray," and, on the other hand, "the lofty turrets and spires of the Dominion Buildings, whose massive walls tower above the lofty bluff as it there juts out and overhangs the dark rushing river," he asks, in view of the imposing Capitol and the beauty of its environs "whether Washington or any other city of America can show so grand a coup d'œil."

There was a halo of romance surrounding the Ottawa river in the olden times. It was the great highway, during the 17th century, for the Indian tribes, when bringing their furs from the North West to trade with the early settlers of Montreal, and the hardy French Voyageurs had many thrilling experiences when canoeing through its solitudes in those early days. By the Indians it was called

Kit-chi-sippi, which means "the great or grand river." There are many points along its course made memorable by the tragic scenes of slaughter which took place there, when contending parties, raising the war cry, rushed to battle to avenge old feuds. One of these points was in the neighborhood of the Chaudière Falls, whose Indian name was Asticou, which signifies "the Cauldron." Here, when the ice broke up, came large bands of the Iroquois from the St. Lawrence in quest of plunder, and, lying in ambush, waiting for the passing canoes, many a savage encounter took place between them and other tribes. Here, also, we are told, it was the custom among the Algonquins, on reaching the Falls, to perform that curious mystic ceremony of collecting pieces of tobacco in a dish, and, after dancing around it with doleful chanting, listening to a harangue by one of their Chiefs, the dish was thrown into the boiling cauldron to propitiate the demons of the place, in the hope of securing a safe journey and protection from their ancient foes, the dreaded Iroquois.

The name first given to the Ottawa river by the early French traders was "la Rivière des Algonquins," or, as is otherwise given "la Rivière des Algoumequins," but when the Algonquin tribe was broken up and scattered by the Iroquois, in 1650, the name was changed to "la Rivière des Outaouais" (subsequently modernised to the Ottawa river), as this tribe then took a leading part in trading with the French, and assisted in maintaining free communication between Montreal and the North West; hence the probable meaning of the name "River Guardians."

Champlain, in 1613, ascended the Ottawa in the hope of securing a North passage to Cathay, but being disappointed in this, having been misled by the statement of a young Frenchman named Nicolas de Vignau, he returned to Montreal. Three years later he made a second trip, passing on to Lakes Huron and Simcoe, where he was joined by the Algonquins in a campaign against the Iroquois. This was the commencement of that long, fierce feud which existed between that tribe and the early French settlers, with few intermissions till the close of the French rule.

Coming down to more recent times, Philemon Wright, an enterprising farmer of Woburn, Mass., made several exploring expeditions up the Ottawa, beginning in 1796, and in 1800, removed from Woburn and made a new home for himself and family in what is now Hull, but was then a waste wilderness, visited only by roving bands of Indians and wild animals. At first, the Indians objected to his settling there, but, on the payment of $20.00, their objections were withdrawn, and, as a pledge of their friendship they created him a chief of their band. One of Mr. Wright's employes was Nicholas Sparks, a shrewd, wide-awake man, whose name afterwards became intimately associated with Bytown in its first settlement. It is stated that, in 1826, he purchased land, comprising some 200 acres, for between $400 and $500. This was bounded on the North by Wellington Street, on the South by Maria Street, on the West by Concession Street, and on the East by what is now known as Waller Street. This proved a most fortunate speculation, for when the Canal was being built he sold lots to the settlers at good prices, and by subsequent sales, he realized what was considered at that time a very large fortune.

RIDEAU FALLS

Rideau Canal

At the close of the American war of 1812, the Home Government, owing to the danger incurred in transporting arms and supplies from Montreal to Lake Ontario by the St. Lawrence route, began to look out for a new and safer one, by way of the Ottawa. Accordingly, in 1815, Sir John Gordon Drummond was instructed by Lord Bathurst to ascertain the probable cost of opening canal communication by the Ottawa and Rideau Rivers. Several commissions were appointed from time to time dealing with this undertaking. At length, after numerous delays, Lieut.-Col. By, of the Royal Engineers, and his assistant Lieut. Pooley, were instructed to commence the construction of the Rideau Canal at what was then known as "Sleigh Bay," now the inlet leading to the first lock. A commencement was made early in 1827, and on 16th August of the same year, Sir John Franklin, the celebrated arctic explorer, laid the corner stone. On 1st October, Lord Dalhousie, Governor-General, paid a visit to and inspected the works. The Canal was finished and formerly opened on 29th May, 1832, when the Steamer, "The Pumper," with Col. By and his family on board made the first passage from Ottawa to Kingston. The Canal is 126¼ miles, with a lockage of 146½ feet, besides 24 stone dams. Without entering into details, it may be stated that the cost in round numbers amounted to £807,774, or in currency about $4,038,871. As was to be expected, the construction of the Canal brought a large influx of laborers, mechanics and professional men of various callings. To quote from a letter from Bytown, published in "The United Empire Loyalist," of Kingston, and dated December 22nd, 1827, the writer says:

"This town has made astonishing progress in one year—before then a complete wilderness, now it can boast of 2000 inhabitants, many excellent stone and timber-built houses, a market place, school, Catholic and Methodist meeting houses, while an English and Scotch church are in progress. Over the Falls of Chaudière a chain of bridging has been thrown, connecting Upper and Lower Canada, at the same time Bytown and Hull. Looking, therefore, at Bytown in its present crude state, who can think otherwise but that, some day or other, it is to form a most important station in Canada." The prediction of this writer has been more than realized, as subsequent events have shown. It has been stated that Sir John Franklin, when laying the foundation stone of the locks, predicted that the new settlement, then forming, might in the future become the Capital of Canada, and the same prediction is attributed to Col. By and Philemon Wright. Be this as it may, the hamlet became a village in 1827, the village became a town in 1847, and in 1854, having now a population of 10,000, it became a city, and, discarding the old name given it in honor of Col. By, it received the more euphonious name Ottawa. The growth of the city has been rapid. In 1861 it had a population of 14,500; 1870, 20,561; in 1880, 24,025; in 1890, 43,122, while in 1900 it was 58,193. The area of th city since 1887, when New Edinburgh was annexed, has been considerably enlarged. On 1st Jan ary, 1889, part of the Township of Gloucester, adjoining New Edinburgh, including the islands the Rideau river, also part of the Township of Nepean, including Stewarton, Rochesterville, Mou Sherwood and Orangeville were annexed, making the present area of the city 3,365¼ acres. 1867 the assessment of the city was $5,011,840, in 1890 it amounted to $24,478,800.

Capital of Canada

Quebec had been the Capital of Canada prior to the conquest, and continued to be so till 1791, when Upper and Low Canada were constituted separate Provinces, Toronto then being made the Capital of the former and Quebec that of the latte In 1840, when the Provinces were again united, Kingston was at first selected as the seat of Government, but objections bei raised against this arrangement, the Capital was transferred in 1843 to Montreal, where it remained till 1849, when, on t burning of Parliament House there, it was decided to hold the meetings of Parliament alternately in Quebec and Toront This peripatetic movement from one city to the other every fourth year was found to be very inconvenient and expensive, s in 1857, an address was passed by Parliament praying Her Majesty the Queen to select the permanent seat of Government.

compliance with this request, the Queen, on the advice the then Governor-General, Sir Edmund Head, selecte carried that Ottawa ought not to be the permanent seat the question was raised, if not in Ottawa, where should be? At length, in February, 1859, after a heated and mo exciting discussion, it was finally resolved that the decision the Queen should be sustained, and so Ottawa carried th day and became the Canadian Capital. It is now general admitted that, apart from its political advantages, no oth site could have been found anywhere so suitable for the ere tion of the necessary Public Buildings as the picturesque magnificent site of Parliament Hill. After the settlement this troublesome question, the construction of the noble p of buildings, which are now the admiration of all visitors the city, was commenced in 1859, and on the 1st Septemb 1860, His Royal Highness, the then Prince of Wales (n

Ottawa has a number of Parks and Public Prom ades, which for their beautiful surroundings can scarc be excelled. Among those may be mentioned the dri and walks around Parliament Hill, comprising some thi acres in extent; Cartier Square, Rockliffe Park, Lansdow Minto, and Victoria Parks, and, most beautiful of Major's Hill, which is a favourite resort during the su mer months; nor must we omit to mention the "Lov Walk," running along the face of the high cliff, through a charming avenue of overhanging trees reaching down to the ri some 200 feet below. There are many other summer resorts in the neighbourhood of Ottawa which well repay a visit, such the Experimental Farm and Britannia-on-the-Bay, reached by street cars; the Queen's Park and Hotel at Aylmer, easily ac sible by Electric Railway; the Deschenes, Chelsea, Kingsmere, Besserer's Grove, &c.

As regards educational matters, Ottawa has always held a foremost posit both as regards Public Schools and hig Institutions of Learning. There are also Schools for Young Ladies, among which may be mentioned "The Presbyter Ladies' College," besides Business and Music Colleges, &c. The Young Men's and The Young Women's Christian Ass tions may be mentioned in this connection, both of which are doing much-needed and excellent work, in looking after safe-guarding the young. The Canadian Bible Institute, conducted by the Rev. J. A. Macfarlane, M.A., is worthy of spe commendation, having for its object the revival of intelligent Bible study by means of courses of lectures. These courses are held during the winter at the Institute in Ottawa, and at other times at convenient points in surrounding Districts.

Electric Cars

THE Electric Car System of Ottawa is one of the most efficient and best managed in Canada. It was formally opened on 30th June, 1891, having incorporated the Horse Car Service, which was organized in 1870. It affords easy and expeditious access to all parts of the City, as well as to a number of outlying points of interest; and it is not at all improbable that, in a short time, we may have a radiating system of Electric Railways connecting this city with surrounding villages and towns.

The unlimited supply of water power in and around Ottawa will, doubtless, have a most important bearing on the future development of our City. Sir Charles Dilke, in his "Problems of Greater Britain," predicts that ultimately the leading manufacturing centres of the world will be in the neighbourhood of water falls, and, probably, no city anywhere is more fortunate in this respect than our own fair city, whose Motto, "Advance," has been most happily chosen.

Mention might also be made, did space permit, of the numerous Railway lines which converge in Ottawa, of which there are now ten in operation

As the General Assembly meets this year in St. Andrew's, it may not be inappropriate to give a condensed statement regarding its history. The site was granted by Mr. Nicholas Sparks, and in consideration for this, he was made the owner of a pew in the Church. The Hon. Thos. MacKay, who had the contract for the construction of the locks, sent a large gang of laborers, masons and mechanics, and, utilizing the stones obtained from the excavation made in connection with the Canal it is said that the Church was built within a week. Probably this statement must be taken with a grain of salt, but, as we are told that the first Presbyterian Service, in those early days, was held under a tree, we may conclude therefore that the utmost dispatch would be used in erecting the Church.

ST. ANNE'S CHURCH, 1750

On November, 28th, 1828, the Church property was deeded to Messrs. Thomas MacKay and Mathew Connell as Trustees. The first Minister was the Rev. John Cruickshank, who came from Scotland in 1830, and was inducted by the late Rev. Dr. Macher of Kingston, on the first Sabbath of March of the same year. On leaving Bytown in 1843, he went to Brockville, and later to N gara. He returned to Scotland and became Minister of Turiff in Aberdeenshire. The Rev. Alex. McKidd succeeded him, January, 1844. He removed to Hamilton in 1846. The Rev. Dr. Norman McLeod, of Glasgow, having been requested by a Committee of the Church, to recommend a successor to Mr. McKidd sent out the Rev. William Durie, who was inducted on the 14th January, 1847, but his tenure of office was of short duration, as he contracted fever when attending to the poor immigrants stricken down with ship fever, who were housed in sheds at the Canal Basin, and died 12th September, 1847, his death, under the circumstances, being deeply regretted by the community. The Rev. Alex. Spence, D.D., was appointed to the charge, July 27, 1848. During his incumbency, to meet the growing requirements of the congregation, the church was enlarged in 1854. He left Ottawa in 1867, returning to Scotland, where he died some years ago. He was followed by the Rev. D. M. Gordon, D.D., who was inducted 17th December, 1867. It was during his pastorate, that the present St. Andrew's Church was built, Sabbath the 21st January, 1872, being the last day on which divine service was held in the old church, and on Sabbath 25th, January, 1874, the first service was held in the new church. Having received a call from Knox Church, Winnipeg, he left Ottawa in 1882, subsequently removing to Halifax, in response to a call, in December 1887 he accepted the charge over St. Andrew's Church, Halifax. In October 1894, he was appointed Prof. of Systematic Theology and Apologetics in the Presbyterian College, Halifax, which position he still holds. In 1883, the Rev. W. T. Herridge, D.D., was inducted to the Church and is still its Minister.

It may be of interest to state, that it was from St. Andrew's Church, on the ninth day of June, 1874, that a procession, composed of the Members of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, headed by the Venerable Moderator, Rev. J. Rannie, M.A., in his gown and bands, set forth to meet the General Assembly of the Canada Presbyterian Church in Session at the same time within Knox Church. It was a sight never before seen in the streets of this City, a sight that filled the hearts of the lovers of union with hope and joy, as the precursor of the happy time when the Presbyterian Churches in Canada should be one; and though the union was not finally consummated till the following year in Montreal, this surely was the day of their espousals.
